Dan Meek is a Managing Consultant working across our LIW Capability and Channel Practices.

Dan works with the LIW team to continuously review and challenge the ways in which we deliver and embed lasting value in our relationships. He works alongside consultants and clients to look for opportunities to leverage technology and customer platforms, to maximise leadership impact, while also increasing our engagement effectiveness. He is also an accredited LSI Performance Coach and has a successful history in leading high performance sales teams.

Dan was previously a Sales Director at Talent2, The Learning Group and SkillSoft. In these roles, he successfully lead each team to over achieve their business results, while developing innovative solutions to help clients and industries increase their organisational agility through people and technology. In 2005 Dan, with SkillSoft, introduced Books24x7 to the APAC Leadership market. Realising that there was a need to deliver relevant informal learning resources to busy executives, he worked closely with partners in this space to create a solution that would “embed” key leadership concepts whilst supporting leaders with “instant thought leadership”. The result was hugely successful – and adopted in many regions around the world.

Prior to working in Sales and Sales Leadership, Dan was a Learning Consultant with Applied Learning Australia – and spent his time designing and delivering innovative learning programmes for large Australian organisations.

Dan's personal time is spent with his young family, surfing, golfing, or dabbling in photography.
