Consultant
kim.austen@liw3.com

With over 14 years of facilitation and training experience, Kim's passion for helping people improve their potential and connect with each other, has led to a perfect alignment with LIW since 1997.

Kim has concentrated her career on the development of individuals, leaders and teams in a variety of challenging workplace environments, functional areas and industries, both locally and globally.

Her consulting career began in 1994 with the design, development and delivery of corporate experiential leadership and teamwork programs for Outward Bound Australia. She has since applied her knowledge and enthusiasm to leadership programs, creative thinking workshops and business simulations, and, since 2000 is a Director in a successful team development company.

With prior experience in marketing management and business development roles both within the IT and advertising sectors, Kim understands the complexity that leaders and their teams face to create the high performance and resonance they strive for.

Described as having boundless energy, a positive outlook and a creative mind, Kim is also actively involved in volunteer work with the Heart Foundation, is a keen adventure and multi-sport participant and runs a women's network cycling group.
